The website I have decided to redesign is Suzanne Collins website. The website's main issue is that it lacks any contrast. This can be seen in the fact that the website only uses 5 colors, making the use of them confusing to the reader. This can be seen in the reviews of the books on the main page, as the same color is used for multiple headings making it difficult to discern the difference between sections of the website. The failed use of contrast is also seen in the layout of the text on the page. The text for both the reviews of individual books and the current featured book on the page are written in the same font style making it difficult to separate them. On the matter of the individual books reviews, the reviews are separated by genre, but this is not conveyed well due to the font and color choices. The website can be redesigned to better focus on the idea of contrast. By having additional fonts and colors the book reviews on the main page can be separated and more easily read. By also having multiple formats for this information to be displayed the sections can also be better distinguished.
